

Improve morale & boost productivity by thinking beyond security

Products used:

One door

2 x Integrated individual systems

The client

Already a client of Welcome Gate, a large tech firm based in London needed help in encouraging staff to access the in-house gym at times that suited them, without encountering a busy gym. With over 1,000 staff and a focus on improving wellbeing across the company, the firm wanted to integrate a multifunctional security tool that could be used to secure the gym as well as inform staff members of busy periods throughout the day.

The challenge

Healthy employees lead to a happy office environment! With a vested interest in promoting a healthy workforce, the firm wanted to deliver an area that would provide staff respite from their demanding roles; offering a place to stimulate their overall wellbeing. One of the biggest challenges the firm faced, was understanding if and when the gym would be used and how frequently. By identifying the accessibility of the gym, they could then look at ways of promoting the gym internally.

The solution

As an existing client of Welcome Gate, we understood their requirements and their existing systems, allowing us to deliver an access control solution that would seamlessly fit within their way of working, quickly and easily.

With an initial recommendation to lock down the gym to secure the equipment, this enabled us to integrate a two-point system that not only protected the gym but could feed back valuable data to staff. By linking data from the access control system to their intranet, staff could then log in and physically see how busy the gym was in real-time, saving overall time (and effort) on the journey to the allocated area, which could have been 6 floors away from their work environment.

Using two intelligent security systems that could monitor who entered and exited the gym and feed in the maximum capacity the gym could hold, the systems sent updates to the companies intranet, which enabled staff to allocate the best time of day to take a break from their desks.

The solution was a success. Today the firm has a thriving, happy workforce, productivity is on the increase and the gym is in full swing throughout the day.

Interested in seeing how access control data could benefit your business? Talk to our team today on 020 7620 6288.